Follow-Up & Deal-Flow SOP

The daily cadence that turns verified leads into closed deals — and makes sure not one falls through the cracks. Updated June 2026.

1. Purpose & The One Rule That Runs Everything

Most deals are not lost on the first call — they are lost in the silence after it. A lead that says "send me info" or "let me think" is not a no; it is a deal waiting on a follow-up that never came. This SOP is the system that guarantees the follow-up always comes, on schedule, until the lead is either Won or honestly marked Lost.

The Prime Rule: Every live lead has a Next Action and a Next Action Date. Always.

If a lead is not Won or Lost, the CRM row MUST have a future Next Action and a date. A row with no next action is a leak. The daily job is simple: open the tracker, work everything due today, and never close the tracker leaving a live lead without its next step scheduled.

2. The Daily Operating Rhythm

Run the pipeline the same way every working day. It takes 5 minutes to set up and keeps the whole machine honest.

- Open with the due list. Sort the tracker by Next Action Date. Everything dated today or earlier is the to-do list. Work it top to bottom.
- Best calling windows for trades — owner-operators answer before the day starts and after it winds down: early AM 7:30–9:00 (before jobs start) and after 4:00 PM (off the truck, before dinner). Mid-day goes to voicemail. Schedule call attempts into these windows.
- Touch, then re-set. The instant you finish any touch (call, email, text, demo send), update the row's Status, log what happened, and set the next Next Action + Date before moving on. Never leave a row "open in your head."
- New leads first, then due follow-ups. Fresh leads are hottest on day 0 — call them the day they land. Then work the dated follow-ups.

3. The Multi-Touch Cadence (per channel)

A lead is not dead until it has been touched across channels on a real schedule. The default sequence for a brand-new lead that hasn't engaged:

Call attempts — the primary channel for trades

- Up to 5 call attempts before marking a non-responder dead. Most answers come by attempt 3 — the persistence past attempt 2 is where the deals hide.
- Spacing: Attempt 1 (Day 0) → Attempt 2 (Day 1, different time window) → Attempt 3 (Day 3) → Attempt 4 (Day 6) → Attempt 5 (Day 10). Alternate AM and PM windows across attempts so you're not always calling at a time they can't answer.

- Always leave a voicemail on attempts 1 and 3 — short, name the business, name the specific issue ("your site is down" / "you don't show up on Google"), give a callback number, and say you'll also text/email. Don't leave a VM every single time — it reads as desperate.
- After a VM, follow with an email the same day so there's something to look at when they think about you.

Email touches — day 0 / 3 / 7

- Day 0: intro email tied to the exact problem found in verification (NONE/DEAD/FACEBOOK_ONLY/BAD). One specific observation, one sentence on what you do, soft ask for a quick chat. Only send to a published email — never a guessed address.
- Day 3: value follow-up — a one-line reminder plus proof (a quick line about a similar local business, or offer the free preview build).
- Day 7: the "breakup" email — short, no pressure: "Still want me to put together that free preview, or should I close your file?" This one gets the most replies of the three.
- Keep every email 3–5 sentences, mobile-readable, plain text, one clear ask.

Text — only after consent

- Do not cold-text. Send a text only after the lead has given a phone number for texting, replied to you, or verbally okayed a text on a call. This keeps Peak 11 compliant and out of the spam bucket.
- Once consented, text is the fastest channel: use it to send the preview link, confirm appointments, and nudge a stalled "let me think."
- Always identify yourself in the first text ("Hey [name], it's Nate w/ Peak 11 — here's that preview I mentioned"). One text, then wait for a reply before sending another.

When to mark DEAD (no-contact lead)

- Mark Lost (no-contact) after 5 call attempts + the full day 0/3/7 email sequence with zero response, spread over ~10 days.
- Bad number + no email + no other channel = mark Lost immediately and note "no reachable contact."
- A hard "not interested / don't call again" = mark Lost now and respect it. Tag the reason (Section 7).

"Dead" means dead now — not dead forever.

A no-contact or soft-no lead is not deleted. It is marked Lost with a reason tag and a 60–90 day re-touch date (Section 7). Circumstances change; the broken site they ignored in June is embarrassing them by September.

4. The "Interested But Not Closed" Nurture

This is where most revenue is won or lost. When a lead is warm but hasn't said yes, they move to Status = Interested and enter a structured nurture. Two common forms:

"Send me info"

- Same day: send exactly what they asked for — short email with one relevant example and the offer of a free preview build (the strongest hook Peak 11 has). Set Status = Interested, Next Action = "follow up on info," Date = +2 days.

- Day 2: call or text — "Did you get a chance to look? Want me to just build you a free preview so you can see it on your own business?" Offering to do the work for free converts "info" requests into demos.
- Day 5: follow-up touch with the preview offer again or a soft proof point. Date next action +5.
- Day 12 / Day 21: spaced re-engagement. After Day 21 with no movement, move to a 30-day check-in cadence rather than weekly.

"Let me think about it"

- Pin down a real reason before you hang up: price, timing, partner/spouse, or just busy. Note it in the row — it changes the follow-up.
- Agree on a specific callback date on the call ("I'll check back Thursday") and put it in Next Action Date. A scheduled callback closes far more than "I'll follow up sometime."
- +3 days: light-touch value, not a pitch — send the free preview or a relevant example. Let the work do the selling.
- +7 days: direct but friendly check-in referencing their stated reason ("You mentioned wanting to run it by your partner — any questions I can answer for them?").
- +14 / +30: taper to monthly. Keep them Interested until they explicitly say no or go fully silent across 3 spaced touches, then Lost.

Re-engagement timing rule of thumb

Warm lead spacing widens as it cools: +2, +5, +12, +21, then monthly. Never let a warm lead sit longer than 30 days without a touch. The free-preview offer is the re-engagement lever — leading with "let me just build it for you free" reactivates more stalled deals than any reminder email.

5. Post-Demo Follow-Up (preview sent, no reply)

You built and sent a free preview site (Status = Sent). This is the hottest moment in the pipeline — they can literally see their new site. Silence here is almost always "busy," not "no." Work it hard:

When	Touch	What to say / do
At send	Deliver + confirm	Text/email the live preview link. "Built you a quick preview of what your new site could look like — take a look and tell me what you think." Set Next Action +1 day.
24 hours	First nudge	Quick text/call: "Did the preview come through okay? Curious what you think." Low pressure, just confirm they saw it. Next Action +2 days.
72 hours	Value + close attempt	Call: walk them through one thing you'd customize, then ask for the deposit to start. "If you like it, I just need a deposit and I'll make it yours." Next Action +4 days.
1 week	Decision push	"Want me to finish this one for you, or should I take the preview down?" Scarcity + clear ask. If no reply, drop to +14 day re-touch, then monthly.

- Keep the preview live while they're being worked; only take it down after the 1-week push fails, and tell them you're doing so (it creates urgency).
- If they engage at any point, move straight to the Won-deal flow — don't keep "nurturing" a ready buyer.

6. Won-Deal Flow (yes → launched → referral)

The moment a lead says yes, Status = Won and this sequence runs. Each step sets the next Next Action so the build never stalls.

Step	Action	Sets next action
1. Deposit	Collect the deposit before any build work. No deposit, no build. Send invoice/payment link same day.	"Confirm deposit cleared" +1 day
2. Contract	Send simple agreement: scope, price (Starter $900 / Standard $1,200), timeline, what you need from them (logo, photos, copy, hours).	"Collect assets" +2 days
3. Build	Build the site per the Build Runbook. Keep them updated at the halfway point so they stay warm.	"Build review w/ client" +build window
4. Launch	Final review, connect domain, go live. Confirm it loads on their phone.	"Confirm live + send login" +1 day
5. Review + referral	2–3 days after launch, ask for a Google review AND a referral while they're thrilled. "Know anyone else who needs a site?"	"Referral ask" +3 days
6. Care Plan	Pitch the $149/mo Care Plan (hosting, updates, edits) as the natural next step. This is the recurring revenue.	"Care Plan check-in" +7 days

The referral + review ask is not optional.

A just-launched happy client is the single best lead source Peak 11 has. Always ask for a Google review and a referral 2–3 days post-launch, while the excitement is fresh. One referral from every won deal compounds the pipeline for free.

7. Lost-Deal Handling (tag the reason, re-touch later)

A Lost deal is data, not a dead end. Always tag why it was lost, then schedule a re-touch. Reasons drive the comeback play:

Lost reason tag	Re-touch play	Re-touch timing
No contact (never reached)	Fresh attempt on a different channel/time. Their situation may have changed.	60 days
Price / budget	Lead with the free preview or a payment-split option. Money frees up.	90 days
Timing ("not right now")	"You mentioned spring — wanted to circle back." Reference their own words.	60–90 days (or their stated date)
Went with someone else	Light check-in: "How's the new site working out?" Often the cheap option underdelivered.	90 days
Hard no / do not contact	Respect it. No re-touch. Keep tagged so it's never re-sourced.	None

- Set the re-touch date in Next Action Date the moment you mark Lost — that's what brings it back automatically. A Lost lead with no future date is gone forever; a Lost lead with a date is a future deal.
- Keep a Lost-reason tally — if "price" dominates, the pitch or the free-preview lead-in needs work; if "no contact" dominates, the calling windows need work.

8. How It Maps to the CRM Tracker

Every lead lives in exactly one Status. The Status tells you which play above is running. Next Action and Next Action Date are mandatory on every row that isn't Won or Lost.

Status	Means	Standard Next Action
New	Verified lead, never contacted.	Call attempt 1 — today (AM or after-4 window)
Called	Attempted but no decision yet (VM, no answer, callback set).	Next call/email per the day 0/1/3/6/10 cadence
Interested	Warm — "send info" or "let me think."	Run the nurture: +2/+5/+12/+21 then monthly
Building	Free preview in progress.	"Finish preview & send" — dated to build window
Sent	Preview delivered, awaiting reply.	Post-demo 24h / 72h / 1-week touches
Won	Said yes — deposit/build/launch running.	Next step of the Won-deal flow (Section 6)
Lost	No for now. Reason tagged.	Re-touch date 60–90 days out (or none if hard no)

The discipline that makes it work: a lead never sits in a Status without a dated next step. When you touch a lead, you (1) update its Status, (2) log what happened in notes, and (3) set the next Next Action + Date — in that order, every time, before moving to the next row.

9. The Closer's Daily Checklist

- Sort tracker by Next Action Date. Everything due today is the to-do list.
- Call new leads first (day-0), in the 7:30–9:00 AM or after-4:00 PM trade windows.
- Work every due follow-up: calls, day 0/3/7 emails, consented texts, post-demo nudges.
- For every touch: update Status, log notes, set the next Next Action + Date. No exceptions.
- Send promised previews same day. A preview sent today is a deal worked tomorrow.
- Before closing the tracker: scan for any live lead with a blank or past-due next action — fix it now. Zero leaks.
